It's easy to tune out during rush hour. But it's good to stay present and be aware of other commuters.

With around 2 million passengers a day using Victoria's trains, trams and buses, we all have a role to play in calling out sexual harassment.

Even the smallest of acts can potentially stop sexual harassment from occurring. Learning to recognise the signs when someone is in danger and stepping in to help prevent the situation from escalating is important.

Only by reporting sexual harassment on public transport will we stop these inappropriate acts being committed.

If you have experienced sexual harassment, call Crime Stoppers on 1300 333 000.

Things will never change if we ignore sexual harassment.
Respect Women: Call It Out.
